Landlords and lettings exhibition

AN EXHIBITION aimed at landlords, letting agents, investors and developers takes place next week.

The Landlord and Letting Show on March 9 and 10 at London's Barbican includes seminars, workshops and information on the latest legislation.

Another chance to find out more about property investment comes later this year at the Landlord Investment Show at Olympia on June 21.

It includes seminars led by industry experts plus 80 exhibitors connected to buy-to-let mortgages, landlord insurance, letting agents and legal services. For more information, visit landlordinvestmentshow.co.uk

Meanwhile, landlords and agencies are encouraged to enter the Landlord & Letting Awards.

Categories are for landlords, agents, public service/not for profit organisations and suppliers.

The judging panel is made up of representatives from professional organisations such as the Residential Landlords Association, the Association of Residential Letting Agents and the National Landlords Association.

The closing date for entries is August 26 and more information is available at landlordawards.co.uk

Oxford's rental market is still buoyant.

An example is a Grade-II listed stone cottage in the conservation area of Old Headington, which includes a dining room, sitting room and study. There are three double bedrooms and three bathrooms and the property, in Larkins

Lane, also has a walled garden.

It is available to let immediately, part-furnished or furnished, at £1,500 per month through Scottfraser.

For more information, call 01865 761111 or visit scottfraser.co.uk

Another property on the rental market is a three-bedroom barn conversion on Headington Hill.

There is an open-plan living/dining area and kitchen with breakfast bar and two bathrooms.

The property comes with an allocated parking space and is surrounded by parkland.

It is available to let, furnished, at £1,995 per month through Finders Keepers which has a dedicated division, Inspired Investment, aimed at helping investors find suitable properties to let.
