This pretty stone cottage in Burford, left, is available to rent at £775 a month, while the three-bedroom property in Little Barrington, right, is £945 per month

Cosy cottages are perfect for life in the countryside

TWO beautiful stone cottages in the Cotswolds are perfect for walks in surrounding countryside.

They also represent good value for money, when compared to prices for rentals in central Oxford.

A three-bedroom home in a rural location often costs the same as a small, one-bedroom apartment in the city.

Both properties also have easy access to the A40, so would suit anyone happy to live in the west of the county, while commuting to Oxford or Cheltenham.

The first house is a pretty stone cottage in Burford.

The property, which has a number of character features such as exposed beams, is on the town's main hill, so within walking distance of shops, cafes, pubs and restaurants.

It is within a few minutes' drive of Cotswold country heartland so ideal for those who enjoy hiking.

The two-bedroom house includes a double bedroom, box bedroom and first-floor bathroom. The living room includes a traditional fireplace and there is a separate kitchen.

At the back is a traditional cottage-style garden.

It is available to let, unfurnished, from April at £775 per month through Finders Keepers.

The second typical Cotswold-style property is a stone cottage in Little Barrington, with views over the village green.

The three-bedroom house has a number of period features and includes a living room with fireplace and wood burner, kitchen and bathroom. All the bedrooms are a good size, according to agents and the cottage also comes with a garage and back garden.

Agents Finders Keepers say the landlord may also allow a small dog in the cottage, which they say would be the perfect walking companion.

It is available to let, unfurnished, at £945 per month.
